

THE PROGRAM

Pathleticz introduces students to the careers that power sports beyond the field. Students discover where they could fit, what the work actually looks like, and how to start moving toward it. They compete in a five-level game on teams modeled after real sports departments, with industry professionals working alongside them instead of presenting to them.

THE GAME

For this event, each team becomes a film and television studio creating a show or movie around a real profession in sports. Industry professionals serve as the research source as teams compete through five scored levels and earn what they need for the final challenge. In Level 5, teams build a studio pitch board with a title and cover art, logline, lead role and cast, and production partners, then pitch it live for the championship.

INSIDE THE GAME

LVL I. Developing Professional Identity Teams form their studio and deliver a professional intro, scored live by a guest professional.	LVL II. Decoding the Sports Industry Teams explore each department with professionals. Their chosen profession becomes the show's focus.
LVL III. Discovering a Career Role Students scout themselves, choose a role, and defend it live. That role becomes the show's lead.	LVL IV. Designing a Career Pathway Students map a three-step career path and commit to one next step. That path becomes the story arc.
LVL V. Debuting on the Biggest Stage Studios build their pitch boards, present to industry judges, and compete for the championship in front of everyone.

BEYOND THE GAME

Every student leaves with a finished Player's Playbook, a career path, and a first step they committed to take. Families leave with the plan, while professionals get an early role in developing and identifying future industry talent. Each event also produces finished Playbooks, before and after data, and photos and footage that show organizations what Pathleticz delivers and help bring the program to more students.
